Gothenburg, 17 November 2017

SOCIAL PRIORITIES UNDER THE JUNCKER COMMISSION: THREE YEARS ON

'It is up to us to ensure that the handwriting of the European Social Model is clearly visible in everything we do. Because Europe is the protective shield for all of us who can call this magnificent continent their home.'

European Commission President Jean-Claude Juncker,
Speech before the European Parliament, 22 October 2014

Since the start of its mandate, the Juncker Commission has placed social priorities at the core of its action and at the heart of the debate on the future of Europe.

Progress has been made: more than 8 million jobs have been created in the EU over the last three years, unemployment decreased to its lowest level since early 2009 and, with 235 million people in a job, employment levels are reaching an all-time high.

There is wind in Europe's sails but there must be no complacency. More than 18 million persons are still unemployed, including 17% of Europe's youth.

At the same time, the world of work and our societies keep changing and there are as many new opportunities as there are challenges.

This Commission has taken and continues to take action to modernise Europe's social market economy and achieve a 'social triple A' for Europe. Several initiatives are still pending before the EU legislator: out of the 19 legal proposals put on the table so far during this mandate in this field, 12 still need to be adopted.

It is a shared and future-proof commitment to assert and better deliver on the rights that Europeans stand for, from gender equality to social protection and from fair working conditions to lifelong learning. The Pillar will serve as a framework for a renewed process of convergence towards better living and working conditions across the EU.

Europe's social priorities cut across all policy domains. This Commission has put social considerations on a par with economic ones in all its core activities, such as the European Semester of Economic Policy Coordination, the deepening of economic and monetary union, the Investment Plan for Europe (the so-called 'Juncker Plan') and its flagship initiatives for the completion of the single market — from the Digital Single Market to the Energy Union — as well as in the EU's trade and international relations.
